Located at the border between Kyrgyzstan and Tajikistan, Lenin Peak is the third highest among the five seven thousand belonging to the vast territories of the former Soviet Union. The classical route to Lenin Peak does not have any steep rock or icy areas. This characterizes this peak as one of the most accessible summits above 7000 metres.

Nevertheless! You should never forget that 7134m, the actual height of Lenin Peak, encompasses certain risks related to altitude issues. A successful climb demands a very responsible way of organization of any expedition.

To join this expedition you need an appropriate level of fitness, basic mountaineering skills, prior experience at high altitude, and a strong will required to climb on a 7000m mountain.
